Alixé Cameron has a corporate commercial law practice with a focus on commercial real estate, including the acquisitions, dispositions, or leasing of all types of commercial, industrial, farm and development properties. She advises clients in relation to their development of bareland and conventional condominium projects, and assists clients with their distressed, restructuring or foreclosure real estate matters.

Alixé regularly advises one of Canada's leading national retailers in relation to their acquisition and dispositions of their owned retail and commercial developments and their numerous retail leasing projects across Western Canada. She often works for tenants and landlords in other commercial, retail, industrial, farm and office leases.

Alixé also represents clients in the agribusiness, food and beverage sector, including cattle producers, farmers, ranchers, food and beverage retailers and breweries. She has significant experience with the Foreign Ownership of Land Regulations in relation to controlled lands in rural Alberta, including obtaining Orders in Council from the applicable ministry.

Alixé also assists with restructuring and insolvency matters, including significant and complex receiverships, CCAA reorganizations and distressed acquisitions and dispositions of land of all sizes and varieties throughout Alberta.

In addition to her practice, Alixé has lectured at a local learning institution on Alberta real estate law. She is or has been a director on a number of corporations, both charitable and private.

Prior to joining Bennett Jones, she practised with a firm in Queensland, Australia. In her off time, Alixé enjoys training and riding her horses in local show jumping competitions and spending time with her husband and three (giant) dogs.
